UY KUYTEAV

Traditional
Cambodian Noodles

Rice is Cambodia’s staple food and Phnom Penh’s favourite dish. In fact, Cambodians enjoy rice in many different ways; from the rice crackers for snacks to rice pudding for dessert. But the most revered is still the Kuyteav, a rice noodle soup which is enjoyed by young and old throughout the country for breakfast. You can find it everywhere, from Mom’s kitchen to food stalls and street vendors.

At Uy Kuyteav, the renowned Cambodian Master Chef Luu Meng has perfected the taste of this popular dish. The noodles are made from the world’s best Cambodian jasmine rice and served in a savoury soup carefully prepared from quality pork and beef bones, slowly boiled to extract a nourishing and flavourful broth.

The restaurant, on Street 352, is set in an elegant building inspired by the beautiful art of Mr Vann Molyvann, a major figure who contributed to the unique style of 1960s architecture known as the “New Khmer” Era. In addition to this historical feel, freshen up with the natural garden view, while enjoying drinks and dishes including Cambodian beef hot pot with vegetables, grilled chicken with lemongrass and Kampot pepper beef rice.

RAJANA ASSOCIATION

Cambodian Handicrafts

Rajana is a non-profit Social Enterprise helping to develop Cambodians and small products through fair trade. It was founded in 1995 by Cambodia Action, a UK-based NGO working to relieve poverty and promote the Christian faith, and employed young Cambodian people who had been working in a refugee camp in Thailand.

The organisation continued to develop, both as a quality retailer and supporter of sustainable livelihoods, and in 2003 the Royal Government of Cambodia granted Rajana the right to be a "local association", completely Cambodian-run and independent of Cambodia Action.

Since that time Rajana has expanded its presence into Siem Reap, vastly developed its product line, and moved beyond the "small business barriers" to become a significant producer, retailer, and exporter of fair-trade crafts.

SMATERIA

Arts & Crafts

At Smateria, you'll find bags, purses and accessories made using only re-purposed, up-cycled and recycled materials, including fishing net, plastic shopping bags and leather offcuts from a sofa manufacturer.

The bright-coloured, long-lasting bags are designed with Italian flair and made by Cambodian artisans. Smateria's philosophy is to use materials that already exist or that have been designed for another purpose - because you can look beautiful without being wasteful.

Also very much a social enterprise, Smateria began in 2006 with two very clear objectives: to create beautiful, high-quality products using 'bizarre' materials, and to employ Cambodian workers in a fair and sustainable way, giving priority to women and mothers.

Fast-forward from those early days and Smateria can now proudly tick both those boxes, with collections being sold in 15 countries across the globe and 120 employees working in a safe, stable environment in Cambodia.
